

Page one talks about the history of artificial intelligence and machine learning research since the 1950s.

Page two discusses ChromaDB, a vector database used to store embeddings for retrieval augmented generation.

Page three explains that Tesseract OCR is a free and open source optical character recognition engine.